

High School Mentoring Meeting 4

This is the last time you will see the students you mentor before Winter Break. Remember how nervous you were about High School Exams (midterms) the first time you took them?

HELP THEM! I am adding some helpful study habits below. You can use some of these or share what helps you, but remember these students are not you! They may not learn like you- they may not be as smart as you- they may be smarter than you! The big take away is to tell them to study and not wait until the week of midterms to do it. Take out a calendar if needed and help create a plan to study. Explain how the calendar for exams works (it is listed below). Also, remind them about the importance of the GPA.

Check on them if you can, right before testing or during testing. Make sure they are calm and okay. On the other hand, perhaps they are too okay and need to be reminded to take it seriously.

See me with questions!
